FE Student Support in Colleges - COVID-19 FAQs

Contents

Information for Further Education (FE) Students: ................................................................. 3
  Who should students contact if they have COVID-19 related questions about their student support? ............................................................................................................... 3
  Who else can students contact if they need financial help during the COVID-19 pandemic? ......................................................................................................................... 3

Information for Colleges........................................................................................................ 3
  Has SFC put in place any contingencies regarding potential COVID-19-related student support funding implications for colleges? ....................................................... 3
  Will colleges be allowed to fund students beyond 43 weeks if it is necessary to extend a course? ........................................................................................................... 4
  Will student support funding be available in the event we need to extend our courses into June and/or July to allow students to finish the course and achieve their qualification? ......................................................................................... 4
  Should colleges still be paying out student support funding if the student is not meeting the usual attendance criteria? ................................................................. 4
  Will students continue to be paid if they advise the college that they are self-isolating? If yes, how long can this continue for? ................................................................. 5
  Do colleges require evidence students have been advised to self-isolate because they are experiencing some symptoms? ................................................................. 5
  Do colleges require evidence of diagnosis if a student has COVID-19? ....................... 5
  Do students still have to show engagement in their studies? ........................................ 5
  Should colleges continue to pay travel costs to students if they are off sick/self-isolating/there is no teaching on campus? ................................................................. 5
  In the event of the college having to change access to buildings and facilities due to COVID-19, would it still be able to pay direct third-party providers, such as transport companies? ................................................................. 5
  How much information should colleges be asking students to provide in respect of any financial hardship they are experiencing? ......................................................... 6
  Are the funds from redirected Travel Costs open to all FE students or just those who are already in receipt of FE Discretionary Funds (FEDF)? ......................................................... 6
  Are there certain kinds of financial hardship or certain groups of students that colleges should be prioritising for immediate discretionary funds? ......................................................... 6
Can colleges relax the means-testing of discretionary fund awards under the current circumstances? .......................................................... 7
Should the payments be sent on a scheduled basis or a one-off pay out? .............. 7
Should colleges take into account monies to which the student may be entitled from other sources of funding, such as UK Government assistance, when determining discretionary fund awards? ......................................................... 7
The monies available may not be enough to meet all requests. If that occurs, what will be the position? ........................................................................ 7
Is this assistance based on a first come first served basis depending on the college’s availability of funds for the remainder of the academic year?............. 8
Can FE funds be used for HE students in these current circumstances? ............... 8
Should colleges continue to pay childcare costs? ............................................. 8
Some of our childcare (or travel) costs have already been paid in advance, should these funds be recovered? ................................................................. 9
If a childminder closes and cannot take the children of the student and then the children go to another childminder, is the college expected to pay for both costs? ........................................................................................................ 9
Does the college have to check insurance claims by childcare providers or self-employed claims being made to Government, to cover loss of income? .......... 9
Should colleges continue to pay costs to the college’s own nursery? ................. 9
Should colleges redirect any available HE Childcare funds into Discretionary funds for HE students? .................................................................................. 9
Education Maintenance Allowance .................................................................. 9
If schools/colleges close, will EMA continue to be paid? .................................. 9
Will students who are in self-isolation because of COVID-19 receive their EMA payments? ............................................................................................... 9
Will everyone whose application has been authorised on the system continue to receive EMA during any self-imposed isolation and/or complete shutdown of the college? .................................................................................... 10
Do colleges require evidence that students have been advised to self-isolate because they are experiencing some symptoms? ........................................ 10
If the college office closes, will SFC accept an electronic copy of a claim authorisation instead of a signature? ................................................................. 10
Information for Further Education (FE) Students:

If you are a student studying a FE course (below HNC level) at a college in Scotland, please be reassured that colleges are working hard to ensure that your bursary maintenance payments continue to be made as normal.

Who should students contact if they have COVID-19 related questions about their student support?

In relation to any COVID-19 related health concerns, individuals must engage directly with the health authorities (see NHS Inform).

If students have questions about their FE student support funding, they should contact their college’s own student funding office.

Who else can students contact if they need financial help during the COVID-19 pandemic?

The following websites have support and advice:

- Scottish Welfare Fund helps families and people in Scotland who are on low incomes through Crisis Grants and Community Care Grants
- Child Poverty Action Group (CPAG) provides guidance on potential sources of support that may be available when clients are without money because of benefit delays, sanctions or some other crisis
- Coronavirus and claiming benefits has help relating to Universal Credit
- The UK Government has provided guidance and support for those affected by Coronavirus (COVID-19)

- The Scottish Government has announced a Coronavirus food fund which can be accessed via local authorities

Information for Colleges

Has SFC put in place any contingencies regarding potential COVID-19-related student support funding implications for colleges?

We are working with colleges and the NUS to consider how best to support students, particularly those in hardship. We expect colleges to explore their overall capacity to support students within existing resources. In order to help colleges support students, SFC arranged for some of the April-July 2020 student support funding allocation to be paid in March 2020 where requested, so that colleges have access to funds to be able to make awards immediately to students facing increased financial hardship.
Individual colleges should continue to liaise with their Outcome Agreement Manager (Regional Strategic Body for assigned colleges) on specific student support issues. We are keeping our collective support for students under review at this difficult time.

Will colleges be allowed to fund students beyond 43 weeks if it is necessary to extend a course?

Yes, colleges will be allowed to fund students beyond 43 weeks if required for COVID-19 reasons, where that is necessary to allow students to complete their course and achieve their qualification, and if funding is available. But colleges must seek individual approval for any such extensions by contacting their Outcome Agreement Manager in the first instance (Regional Strategic Body for assigned colleges).

Will student support funding be available in the event we need to extend our courses into June and/or July to allow students to finish the course and achieve their qualification?

There is currently no rule that prohibits student support being provided in any particular month. Colleges will be allowed to fund students beyond 43 weeks if that is required for COVID-19 reasons, where that is necessary to allow students to complete their course and achieve their qualification, and if funding is available. But colleges must seek individual approval for any such extensions, by contacting their Outcome Agreement Manager in the first instance (Regional Strategic Body for assigned colleges).

Should colleges still be paying out student support funding if the student is not meeting the usual attendance criteria?

Where possible, colleges should still try to monitor engagement in the local digital/remote learning activities that have been put in place. If the student reports that they are unable to engage due to illness and if the illness is not related to COVID-19, then this should be treated by the college in the usual way. If the illness is considered to be related to COVID-19 (for example, if the student is reporting symptoms in line with the NHS Scotland national guidance), then this absence should be considered as outwith the college’s usual student absence/sickness absence allowances, and student support funding (except travel costs and childcare costs, as detailed below) should be paid throughout.
Will students continue to be paid if they advise the college that they are self-isolating? If yes, how long can this continue for?

Yes, students should continue to receive all student support funding (except travel costs and childcare costs, see below) when they are self-isolating in accordance with NHS Scotland COVID-19 guidance.

Where colleges are providing online teaching, if the student is well enough to do so, and they have access to the appropriate equipment, then they should continue to engage with the local remote/digital learning provided by the college throughout their self-isolation and afterwards. If the student is not well enough to engage in any remote learning, they should advise their college appropriately, and subsequently let their college know once they are well enough to begin engagement again. They should continue to receive student support funding throughout.

Do colleges require evidence students have been advised to self-isolate because they are experiencing some symptoms?

No.

Do colleges require evidence of diagnosis if a student has COVID-19?

No, as widespread testing is no longer available, the college should not require any evidence to be submitted. They should continue paying student support (except travel costs and childcare costs, as detailed below).

Do students still have to show engagement in their studies?

Yes, if they are self-isolating with no symptoms, and have the access to be able to engage remotely/digitally. If they have symptoms that make them too unwell to study, or indeed receive a positive diagnosis for COVID-19, then they would not be expected to show engagement throughout the duration of their illness.

For colleges which have moved to online teaching, where possible, colleges should still try to monitor engagement in the local digital/remote learning activities that have been put in place. However, we understand that this may not always be possible. In these circumstances, colleges should continue to pay students (minus travel costs and childcare costs, as detailed below) without evidence of engagement.

Should colleges continue to pay travel costs to students if they are off sick/self-isolating/there is no teaching on campus?

No, if the student is self-isolating either with or without symptoms, the student should not be travelling anywhere outside of their home. If there is no longer any teaching taking place on campus, the student does not need to travel to the college. In either of these circumstances, the student should not require any travel costs.
This is also in line with recent national guidance that all unnecessary travel should be kept to a minimum. Colleges may be in a position to redirect some of the student support funding that they had earmarked to support student travel needs.

Please see our separate guidance with regards to the redirection of travel cost funds to discretionary funds.

In the event of the college having to change access to buildings and facilities due to COVID-19, would it still be able to pay direct third-party providers, such as transport companies?

Now that college campuses are closed, we are seeking further guidance with regards to the continuation of payments to third-party providers such as transport companies. More information will follow when it is available.

How much information should colleges be asking students to provide in respect of any financial hardship they are experiencing?

There is a balance to be struck between not requiring too much supporting evidence, which may be difficult for students to provide, whilst also ensuring that a minimum level of information from students is available for colleges to be able to assess who is in the greatest financial need. Colleges should consider the acceptance of electronic signatures and digital copies of any evidence when administering the funds.

SFC encourages colleges to take account of the current COVID-19 pandemic and for the student funding teams to work together with their advice/support services colleagues to be able to identify those most in need at this time. Colleges should take into account the personal circumstances of students when it comes to providing supporting evidence and be as flexible as possible. The 2019-20 Student Support Audit guidance will take full account of this exceptional set of circumstances.

Are the funds from redirected Travel Costs open to all FE students or just those who are already in receipt of FE Discretionary Funds (FEDF)?

The redirected funds should be treated as part of an enhanced FE Discretionary Fund, which is available to all students undertaking SFC-fundable non-advanced courses who meet the eligibility criteria set out in the advised in the 2019-20 Discretionary Fund Policy.

Are there certain kinds of financial hardship or certain groups of students that colleges should be prioritising for immediate discretionary funds?

This is at the college’s discretion, as colleges are best placed to know at a local level who is in greatest need, especially if funding teams work closely with advice/support team colleagues. However, as a general guide, it is suggested that aspects such as these should be kept in mind:
• need for funding for basic essential requirements such as food, heating, lighting;
• the vulnerability of the student;
• whether the student has access to other sources of funding or financial assistance from schemes outside of the college, such as referenced in the ‘Information for Further Education (FE) Students’ section at the start of this document.

Can colleges relax the means-testing of discretionary fund awards under the current circumstances?

Under the current circumstances, colleges can be flexible with regards to a needs assessment having to be based on evidence showing the student’s net financial position.

Should the payments be sent on a scheduled basis or a one-off pay out?

This should be decided on a case-by-case basis, and taking account of the college’s payment systems and resources. For example, it may be that a student only requires short-term financial aid to tide them over until one of the forms of UK Government assistance is available to them. For other students, they may have no other source of financial support for the entire duration of the COVID-19 crisis and may require payments on a scheduled basis.

Should colleges take into account monies to which the student may be entitled from other sources of funding, such as UK Government assistance, when determining discretionary fund awards?

As student support funds are a cash-limited budget, colleges should target discretionary fund awards to those that are most in immediate financial need. Since most of the planned UK Government assistance is not immediately available, we would expect colleges to meet any short-term financial needs that they can (with reference to the prioritising considerations in the response above). However, when making any longer-term assessments, colleges should keep in mind the potential wider funding sources that may be available. Students who are in employment should be able to advise if their employer has been able to place them on furlough.¹

The monies available may not be enough to meet all requests. If that occurs, what will be the position?

Student support funds are cash-limited. Colleges should also direct students to other agencies and funding sources which are available for COVID-19 pandemic financial assistance, as detailed in the ‘Information for Further Education (FE) Students’ section at the start of this document.

---

¹ Furloughed workers are those whose employers cannot cover staff costs due to coronavirus, and as such they have been asked to stop working, but have not been made redundant. Employers can apply to HMRC to pay up to 80% of the wages of people who are furloughed, under the Coronavirus Job Retention Scheme.

Is this assistance based on a first come first served basis depending on the college’s availability of funds for the remainder of the academic year?

Colleges should manage their available funds, enhancing them where possible with funds from travel and childcare funding no longer required. SFC has already worked with colleges to provide an advance of funding in March for those that requested it. Colleges should continue to alert SFC if they anticipate that they are not able to meet all of the student needs they have identified, after other COVID-19 funding sources have also been taken into account.

Can FE funds be used for HE students in these current circumstances?

No, FE funds cannot be used to pay discretionary awards for HE students. Student Awards Agency Scotland (SAAS) provides discretionary funding for HE students in colleges and universities. SAAS is working on ways to enhance the HE Discretionary funds available, and has already started to communicate with institutions in this regard.

Should colleges continue to pay childcare costs?

Where childcare providers are still open and the student’s child/ren are continuing to attend (they may meet the Government’s criteria for being able to continue to do so), then, yes, colleges should continue to pay these childcare costs.

Where childcare providers are closed, or not available to the student’s child/ren any more (if they do not meet the Government’s criteria for being able to continue to do so), but the student has provided evidence to the college that the providers are requesting that all or some of the fees are still due then, yes, colleges should continue to pay these childcare costs.

Where childcare providers are closed, and there is no longer a requirement for fees, college should stop paying childcare costs. Colleges are then able to redirect these childcare funds to discretionary funds instead.

Where childcare providers are closed, but there is still a requirement to pay a certain amount of fees, students should provide evidence of this to the college. The college should then continue to pay the reduced level of fees required whilst redirecting any remaining amount to discretionary funds instead.

SFC does not expect colleges to recover any funding for childcare costs already paid.
Some of our childcare (or travel) costs have already been paid in advance, should these funds be recovered?

No, SFC is not expecting colleges to recover any funds already paid out. The new guidance to stop paying childcare providers is effective from this point forwards and should be considered as applying to any payments from now on.

If a childminder closes and cannot take the children of the student and then the children go to another childminder, is the college expected to pay for both costs?

No, only the fees for a maximum of one childcare provider per child should be paid at one time.

Does the college have to check insurance claims by childcare providers or self-employed claims being made to Government, to cover loss of income?

No, the requirement to pay fees should be determined according to the above guidance only.

Should colleges continue to pay costs to the college’s own nursery?

We are developing further guidance with regards to college-owned nurseries. More information will follow when it is available.

Should colleges redirect any available HE Childcare funds into Discretionary funds for HE students?

Whilst HE Childcare funds come from an SFC budget, HE Discretionary funds come from a SAAS budget. At the moment, it is not possible to move from one to the other. We request that colleges hold aside any HE Childcare funds saved for now, and colleges should continue to use the HE Discretionary funds from SAAS in the first instance. SFC will engage with colleges in May to obtain an up-to-date position.

Education Maintenance Allowance

If schools/colleges close, will EMA continue to be paid?

The guidance states that an authorised absence includes a scenario where the learning centre is closed due to unforeseen circumstances. This would apply in this instance.

Will students who are in self-isolation because of COVID-19 receive their EMA payments?

Yes. The guidance states that an authorised absence includes ill health and additionally the breakdown of a student’s method of transport to and from the in institution. This also applies to those who have self-isolated due to their parents/carers having health issues which put them at risk.

Will everyone whose application has been authorised on the system continue to receive EMA during any self-imposed isolation and/or complete shutdown of the college?

Yes. As stated above, the guidance allows for absence for unforeseen circumstances, which is applicable in this current situation. It is appreciated that many doctors’ surgeries will not be in a position to issue medical certificates and SFC urges colleges to view such cases sympathetically and follow the discretion which the guidance allows.

Do colleges require evidence that students have been advised to self-isolate because they are experiencing some symptoms?

No.

If the college office closes, will SFC accept an electronic copy of a claim authorisation instead of a signature?

Yes, in these exceptional times, with many people being advised to work from home, SFC will accept an email authorisation, from one of the college’s authorised signatories.

The college should complete the EMA return information as required on EMA online and then download the document, which would under normal circumstances be passed to an authorised signatory for signing before being emailed to SFC.

In the current environment, the alternative process to follow is:

1. The EMA return document should then be emailed to one of the college’s authorised signatories for an electronic authorisation;

2. The authorised signatory should include the following text in their email:

   I approve the EMA claim made by (College Name) for the amount of (£XXX)

3. The EMA claim should then be forwarded by the authorised signatory, including the above text and the downloaded EMA claim, to EMAreturns@sfc.ac.uk by the usual monthly deadline.

---

6 April 2020